NOTES:

Known Sphere Of Operation: Triangle, Cardassian border

Data Reliability: C

Major Data Source: Cardassian Sector Intelligence

Unlike most captured Klingon vessels, the Furious Revenge was so badly damaged that it was nearly abandoned at the battle site and left for dead. However, a Romulan salvage merchant believed that the vessel was able to be refit and towed the hulk to Romulan space the following month.

Due to it's significant damage, builders were forced to scavenge for much of the equipment needed to refit the Revenge, but by 2344, the ship was operational and was commissioned into the Romulan fleet.

The Revenge spent five years along the Klingon border conducting counter espionage missions before being transfered to the lower Triangle region. In 2361, she was again damaged while engaging Orion Syndicate vessels attacking a Romulan supply convoy. She was dry-docked after returning to Romulan space and refit with a new warp drive and longer ranged weapons. While most of her primary weapon load was not as powerful as her previous refit, it was felt that the additional range of her systems more than made up the difference. The Revenge would go on to serve with distinction during the Dominion War and was eventually retired in 2379. She was eventually disarmed and sold to private interests in the Triangle.
